She-thinkers: freedom as a concept and keywords

Located in the non-univocity, in the complexity and diversity of meanings of the concept of freedom, and focusing on women thinkers, the exhibition elaborated in the Barri Vell Campus Library of the University of Girona, far from establishing a genealogy, outlines interrelationships in the use and definition of the word freedom between past and present.

The concept of freedom is polysemic and, in each thinker, freedom is related to keywords such as determinism, rights, conscience, commitment, responsibility or morality.

On one hand, around a selection of women thinkers from the 17th-20th centuries, a network of nodes unfolds and links the keywords and the ideas articulated in their thinking about freedom.

On the other hand, based on a selection of sentences from different thinkers that place us in various contexts, we can follow the thread towards their original writings and at the same time think about freedom in contemporaneity.
